1. Introduction

Solihull Together, the Safeguarding Adults Board, the Safeguarding Children Partnership, Safer Solihull and partners in Solihull are committed to protecting children, young people and adults from all types of exploitation. We recognise we have much to do to ensure that we deliver a consistently robust and integrated response to children, young people and adults at risk of exploitation in the borough. We acknowledge that this is a fast changing and fluid landscape, however there is a strong collective commitment to working in partnership to identify exploitation at the earliest opportunity and, where necessary, to ensure that individuals, their families and support networks access the right services at the right time. To support this we have developed the boroughs first all age exploitation reduction strategy. It outlines the partnership approach we are taking in the borough, and is aimed at people who are working to reduce exploitation in Solihull.

Our ambition is to work in partnership to prevent exploitation; identify and protect those at risk of exploitation; strengthen resilience of victims and communities; support victims in their recovery; and pursue those who perpetrate exploitation and bring them to justice.

It is essential that all partners working with people at risk and the wider public understand what exploitation is, how it differs from other forms of abuse, and how to respond to concerns.

This strategy has been mandated by Solihull Safeguarding Adults Board (SSAB), Solihull Local Safeguarding Children Partnership (LSCP), Safer Solihull Partnership and Solihull Health and Wellbeing Board (H&WBB). It will be delivered through the Solihull Exploitation Reduction Board.

2. What do we mean by Exploitation?

The West Midlands regional definition of exploitation is:

An individual or group takes advantage of an imbalance of power to coerce, control, manipulate or deceive a child, young person or adult and exploits them:

- a) through violence or the threat of violence, and/or
- b) for financial or other advantage of the perpetrator or facilitator and/or
- c) in exchange for something the victim needs or wants.

The victim may have been exploited even if the activity appears consensual due to his /her specific situation. Exploitation does not always involve physical contact, it can also occur through the use of technology, e.g. as the result of a grooming process which takes place during conversations in chat rooms, or through the use of social media.

Solihull recognises that exploitation is deliberate maltreatment and manipulation irrespective of their age, gender, ethnicity, background or ability and sexuality and comes in many forms, including:

- modern slavery
- human trafficking
- sexual exploitation
- criminal exploitation.

Exploitation can also be a strong feature of the following, but these are out of scope for this Strategy, as they are not primarily based on exploitative relationships and already have embedded processes in place to respond to them:

- radicalisation and extremism
- domestic violence and abuse (forced marriages, honour based violence and FGM)
- rogue trader, bogus callers and scammers
- abuse of positions of trust
- hate crime

For glossary of terms see Appendix 1.

It is acknowledged that victims may lack the capacity to consent or may be being threatened or coerced. Use of the Mental Capacity Act (2005) to protect and support people is key- this applies to people aged 16+. Grooming, coercion and control have been known to all have an impact on mental capacity, particularly where sexual or criminal exploitation is a factor.

The following diagram separates out the different forms of exploitation into three Tiers:

- ✓ Tier 1 is the focus of Solihull's Exploitation Strategy, to be delivered by the Exploitation

Reduction Board and the Exploitation Delivery Group.

- ✓ At Tier 2 there are specific established processes and pathways already in place, such as MARAC, Channel, etc., and
- ✓ Tier 3 risks are primarily managed through established statutory safeguarding procedures.

Services in Solihull are delivered based on assessments of need at different levels. The diagram below illustrates in very broad terms how services are structured: Universal Services which are available to everyone, Targeted Support for individuals and families who require additional services to ensure lower level needs and risks are managed, and Specialist Services for individuals with the most significant and complex needs, including the need to be protected from harm.

A mapping exercise is required to identify across the Partnership those services available to support individuals at risk of or experiencing exploitation at the different levels of need

3. National and Local Context

3.1 National Picture

National data, research and reviews are all evidencing the increase in modern slavery, trafficking, sexual exploitation and criminal exploitation of both children and adults.

The Home Office estimates that there are between 10,000-13,000 victims of modern slavery nationally, however this figure is likely to be hugely under-reported.

The National Referral Mechanism (NRM) - the framework for identifying victims of human trafficking or modern slavery and ensuring they receive the appropriate support, in 2019 identified 10,627 potential victims of modern slavery - a 52% increase from 2018. Of which two thirds claimed that the exploitation occurred in the UK only, with just over half of referrals relating to adults and 43% relating to children. Prior to 1 October 2019, the most common form of exploitation for both adults and minors was recorded as labour exploitation (though referrals for criminal exploitation were not recorded separately during this period). In quarter 4 (Oct – Dec 2019), labour exploitation was the most common form of exploitation for adults, whilst criminal exploitation was most common for minors. Potential victims from the UK, Albania and Vietnam were the three most common nationalities to be referred<sup>1</sup>.

Gaming, social media and online forums all have a significant role to play in the trafficking and exploitation of children and adults on a global level, as well as nationally or locally<sup>2</sup>. In addition, there is also recognition from the work of Programme Challenger in Greater Manchester<sup>3</sup> that because services nationally have been working in silos for sexual exploitation, criminal exploitation, modern slavery and trafficking; they have not effectively shared information to recognise that many of the perpetrators are the same people.

There have been a number of high profile cases which have raised the awareness of the extent of (child) sexual exploitation, including Rotherham where it was estimated that 1400 children had been sexually exploited over the 16 year period covered by the National Inquiry.

There is limited information nationally, however, about the sexual exploitation of adults although it is clear that sexual exploitation does not stop when an individual reaches their 18th birthday and in some cases does not start until an individual has reached adulthood. Transition from childhood to adulthood can be seen as a particularly risky period in relation to sexual exploitation. The Casey 'Report of the Inspection of Rotherham Metropolitan Borough Council' in 2015 highlighted that "abuse and violence continues to affect victims into adulthood” and that there were “serious concerns about the group of young people during their transition to adulthood”<sup>4</sup>.

Between February and June 2016 five Joint Targeted Area Inspections (JTAs) focused on child sexual exploitation and children missing from home, care and education. The findings from these inspections are summarised in the overview report ‘Time to Listen – a joined up response to child sexual exploitation and missing children’<sup>5</sup> The report identified that more can be done to ensure that all children and young people receive consistently good support from all agencies and in all areas; poor practice by some professionals and some key agencies means that some children at risk of exploitation were still not getting the response they needed quickly enough and it was emphasised that responding effectively to child sexual exploitation requires all partners to take responsibility for their own work and to work collaboratively with each other.

As partner agencies continued to work together to ensure the response to sexual exploitation is robust, professionals were increasingly becoming aware of other models of exploitation and their impact on vulnerable children and adults, in particular those involving criminal exploitation.

The National Crime Agency (NCA) reports that there are currently over 2000 individual deal line numbers in the UK. Exploitation remains integral to the business model with offenders recruiting, transporting and exploiting vulnerable individuals, including children, to carry out criminal activity essential to their operations. There can be a high risk of violence and serious injury, including loss of life, in relation to county lines offending with vulnerable drug users and runners at the greatest risk of violence. In 2018 the Home Office published its Serious Violence Strategy outlining the Government’s response to knife, gun crime and homicide. Tackling ‘county lines’ and the misuse of drugs is one strand of the national strategy<sup>6</sup>.

In response to increasing awareness of the risks to children being exploited for criminal reasons, three further Joint Targeted Area Inspections were completed in 2018 which also focussed on children associated with gangs and who were at risk of criminal exploitation, including ‘county lines’. The findings of these three inspections are reported in: ‘Protecting children from criminal exploitation, human trafficking and modern slavery: an addendum’<sup>7</sup> which supplemented the previous JTA findings looking at child sexual exploitation. This report recognised that agencies have done much to address child sexual exploitation, but called for them to learn the lessons of the past in responding to the criminal exploitation of children and ‘county lines’. It noted that agencies, locally or nationally, did not yet fully understand the scale or level of this safeguarding challenge, and the need for professionals to be flexible and respond quickly to changing risks. It concluded that family-focused services were not always appropriate for dealing with the exploitation of children outside of a family setting.

The first national review undertaken by the Child Safeguarding Practice Review Panel in February 2020<sup>8</sup> focussed on the response to young people who had already been drawn into criminal exploitation and where high levels of risk of serious harm had been identified. It asked two connected questions about whether young people in need of protection get the help they need at the right time, and what improvements can be made to the way services work together to provide greater protection. The review did identify examples of good practice, but found that young people do not always receive the right help from statutory agencies at the right time. The review identified a number of ways in which services could be improved, including working more effectively with families and responding quickly and flexibly at times when young people are likely to be at their most vulnerable.

3.2 Regional approach

The West Midlands Police and Crime Commissioner (PCC) has set up the West Midlands Violence Reduction Board; a multi-agency strategic partnership which ensures and oversees the effectiveness of arrangements made by individual agencies to prevent and reduce violence, vulnerability and exploitation. This Board will seek to co-ordinate efforts across the West Midlands Metropolitan Area in developing and implementing a public health, long term systemic approach to preventing and reducing violence, vulnerability and exploitation. The establishment of the West Midlands Violence Reduction Unit (WM-VRU) is a collaborative regional approach to addressing violence, vulnerability and exploitation. There are agreements for each West Midlands authority to work with the VRU on its prevention agenda.

In addition, the West Midlands Criminal Exploitation and Missing Board has been established to ensure that there is an effective joined up approach to preventing, identifying and responding to safeguarding children, young people and adults at risk of or experiencing exploitation. The Board is responsible for the development and delivery of multi-agency strategies which prevent children, young people and adults from being harmed by criminal exploitation and reduce the number of children who go missing or are absent in the West Midlands Police Force area; protect those who have been harmed; pursue offenders who have harmed them; and ensure that key stakeholders are effectively contributing towards delivery of the Board's priorities.

Membership includes senior strategic leads responsible for local service responses to exploitation from a range of partner agencies. The West Midlands Criminal Exploitation and Missing Board is accountable to the West Midlands Community Safety Partnership and will provide a six monthly update report to the Violence Reduction Board, Directors of Children and Adult Services Networks and other related forums.

Solihull will support the regional initiatives as required, feed in to the work being undertaken and consider outcomes to ensure that the local response to exploitation is fully informed by regional learning and best practice.

3.3 Exploitation in Solihull

In 2017 the Local Government Association (LGA) carried out a Peer Diagnostic Review of the Solihull Child Sexual Exploitation (CSE) arrangements. It was found that the local response was fully compliant with statutory guidance and that the CSE Strategy was clear and well supported. There was evidence of strong multi-agency support for CSE activity and partnership and multi-agency meetings had a clearly defined purpose and were well attended. Solihull was seen as a champion in the approach to addressing CSE. Recommendations for development included:

- the need to broaden learning about CSE to wider forms of exploitation (in line with the findings from national themed Joint Targeted Area Inspections)
- the need to develop reporting mechanisms to demonstrate impact and outcomes
- the need to embed a dataset to support strategic planning and operational development.

In 2019 Solihull Safeguarding Adults Board completed a Safeguarding Adult Review (SAR) following the death of Rachel who was 20 years old<sup>9</sup>. Rachel had previously been a victim of sexual abuse, and had a history of mental health difficulties and self-harming behaviours. She had also been a victim of sexual exploitation and trafficking from the age of 17 onwards.

The SAR confirmed that there have been a number of important developments during and since Rachel's case, which are enhancing the response to children and adults who are at risk of exploitation, and/or are experiencing mental health issues. However, it also identified that the development agenda remains considerable both in terms of strengthening partnership working, and addressing gaps in service provision.

The learning and priorities for action from this SAR centre around a combination of strategic, partnership working and practice issues in responding to victims of sexual exploitation both pre and post 18 years of age, the processes and eligibility criteria for identifying support when children transition into adulthood, and issues around joint working in response to adults who go missing.

A number of the issues identified by the SAR were not new and had been identified previously through the work of the CSE Steering Group and/or the findings of the Local Government Association (LGA) Peer Diagnostic Review referred to above.

As a hidden crime, the number of identified victims of exploitation in Solihull is concerningly low, in line with the national trend, and as yet we do not have an accurate picture of victim/offender profiles or an understanding of the prevalence of exploitation in its various forms. What we do know, however, is that there are specific local factors which need to be considered in developing the local exploitation profile:

- Solihull has an international airport, Birmingham International, so we are a major port of entry within the United Kingdom which can act as a route into the UK for the purposes of people trafficking and modern slavery.
- The West Midlands Immigration Enforcement Team is located within Solihull identifying individuals at risk of or suspected to be experiencing exploitation.
- Solihull sits within the corridor between the cities of Birmingham and Coventry, which means that it is significantly affected by cross border issues pertaining to organised crime (often drug-related) and opportunities for trafficking and exploitation.
- Solihull is located within easy reach of New Street Railway Station which is a central hub of the British railway system and is the busiest station outside London providing links to areas throughout the UK.
- There are distinct areas of income deprivation in the north of the Borough (some of which are in the bottom 5% nationally).

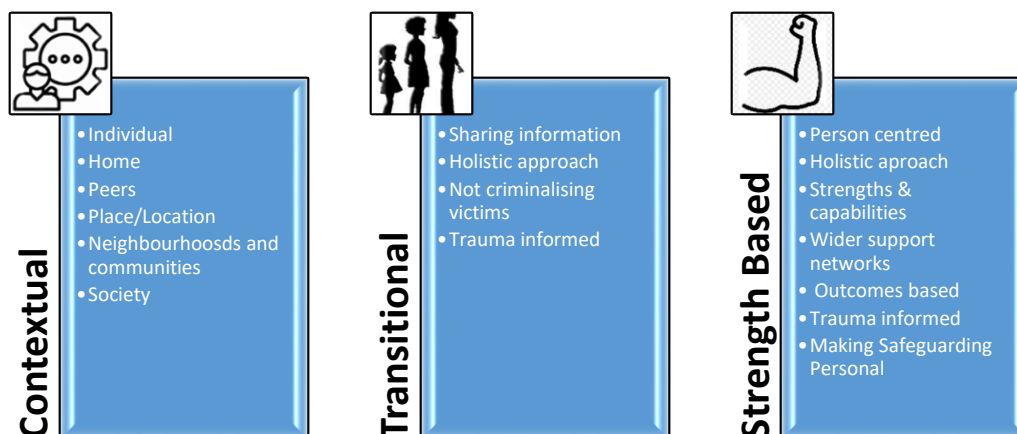

The local data we have available demonstrates that there is activity taking place to respond to victims of exploitation, however we do not yet have a joined-up and comprehensive core dataset which will help us to develop our understanding of exploitation in Solihull. Through the collection and analysis of local data we will develop an understanding of prevalence and the profiles for victims and offenders, locations and models of offending. This, in turn, will support development of the multi-agency response to those at risk and those already being exploited.

3.4 2019- 20 Snapshot

4. Our Safeguarding Approach to Exploitation

In Solihull, we will take a blended approach when working with individuals at risk of being exploited. The agreed model for working with children and young people under 18 years old is contextual safeguarding. Our approach when working with adults will be tailored to the individual, using the principles of strength-based working. It is important to recognise that adult safeguarding duties under the Care Act (2014) relate specifically to people who are at risk due to disability or illness. Young adults at risk may not be covered by Care Act duties, however, in Solihull, we are committed to working in partnership to develop approaches to reducing risk of exploitation for all adults. We will work across the partnership together to ensure the response to children and adult victims of exploitation combines elements from the following approaches:

Contextual Safeguarding is an approach and term developed by the University of Bedfordshire. Solihull has agreed to adopt the Contextual Safeguarding approach in principal when working with children, young people and adults. It requires practitioners to assess and intervene outside of the family setting and relationships in order to safeguard individuals at risk and will enable us to do two things:

- Recognise contextual risks during interventions: record contextual issues; collect information about extra-familial risks during assessments; make referrals about specific concerns;
- Address contextual risk: accept referrals for peer groups, schools and public spaces; screen referrals against contextual thresholds; subject them to assessment; discuss assessments at multi-agency meetings; action a plan to reduce the risks in these contexts. These actions feed into the individual child and family/vulnerable person assessments for the individual affected by that context.

Contextual Safeguarding is not a model, rather an approach that extends the parameters of traditional safeguarding systems to extra-familial settings and relationships. Solihull will seek to achieve this by taking into consideration local demographics, as well as the partnerships and operating systems used by Childrens services, Adult social care and their partners to safeguard against exploitation.

During adolescence and young adulthood in particular, the nature of risks and the way they are experienced become increasingly complex with risks posed by peers, partners and other adults unconnected to their families. These risks:

- often manifest in extra-familial environments including schools, public spaces and online platforms
- are informed by peer norms and relationships
- involve young people perpetrating, as well as experiencing, harm
- can present as the result of perceived 'choices' a young person has made and/or continues to make despite professional/parental intervention
- often feature grooming, coercion, criminality and serious risks of significant sexual and physical harm that create climates of fear and reduce engagement with agencies
- are beyond the control of family members and rarely instigated by family members
- continue into adulthood and particularly for young people during the 18-25 transitional period

Transitional safeguarding is simply a term used to highlight the need to improve the safeguarding response to older teenagers and young adults in a way that recognises their developmental needs. It recognises that adolescence extends into the early/mid-twenties (Sawyer et al. 2018) because the brain is not yet fully developed, and in some cases there will be a need for specific support to help an individual to navigate through this progression safely. A more fluid and transitional safeguarding approach is needed for young people entering adulthood given that harm, and its effects, do not stop at 18 years. The childrens and adults safeguarding systems are conceptually and procedurally different, and governed by different statutory frameworks, which can make the transition to adulthood harder for young people facing ongoing risk and arguably harder for the professionals who are trying to navigate an effective approach to helping them. The 'cliff-edge' in terms of support can be exacerbated by notable differences between thresholds/eligibility criteria for children and adult safeguarding responses (Firmin et al., Research in Practice, 2019).

Strengths-based working

Strengths-based practice is all about the relationship between those who are supported by services and those who provide that support. This means working in collaboration with the person to support them to develop solutions, enabling them to achieve the outcomes which are important to them. In a world of experts they are the experts on what is important to them.

Focusing on strengths does not mean ignoring challenges and addressing these accordingly. Strengths-based approaches are not prescriptive; there is no one-size fits-all model. The strength based approach requires both the practitioner and the person to focus upon their personal strengths and abilities.

The focus is not on what the person can't do, but on where their strengths lie and the supports they have around them in their family and the community.

In strengths-based practice the individual is empowered to have as much choice and control as possible and encouraged to propose options and solutions to enable them to have the life they want.

This is particularly important when working with adults at risk of exploitation, in order to support them to regain control and enable long-term change.

Trauma-Informed Practice

Trauma-Informed practice is grounded in an understanding of and responsiveness to the impact of trauma, and emphasises physical, psychological, and emotional safety for everyone, and creates opportunities for survivors to rebuild a sense of control and empowerment (Hopper et al., 2010).

Duties and Powers

Across the partnership agencies will use the duties and powers invested in them to prevent exploitation and protect and empower victims at risk of or experiencing exploitation. Relevant statutory guidance and legislation includes:

- Care Act 2014
- Mental Capacity Act 2005
- Mental Health Act 1983
- Making Safeguarding Personal: Guide 2014
- Children Act 1989 and 2004
- Children and Social Work Act 2017
- Working Together to Safeguard Children 2018
- Keeping Children Safe in Education 2019
- Modern Slavery Act 2015
- Crime and Disorder Act 1998

In summary we will seek to identify and protect victims of exploitation by:

- ✓ sharing information in a timely manner
- ✓ taking a holistic and contextual approach rather than concentrating on risks, incidents and indicators
- ✓ ensuring that young adults aged 18+ continue to receive services to support their safe transition to adulthood
- ✓ not criminalising victims
- ✓ giving consideration to the impact of trauma and providing support to victims in rebuilding a sense of control and empowerment

5. Strategic Objectives

- To prevent exploitation by increasing awareness and understanding of exploitation amongst individuals, communities, business and planners to maximise the opportunity to prevent its occurrence within Solihull.
- To develop a common understanding of exploitation across the Partnerships with a clear expectation that each organisation is responsible for ensuring its workforce has access to relevant training and development opportunities and its practitioners are signposted to the SSAB and LSCP multi-agency exploitation procedures and tools.
- To improve the recognition, assessment and response to individuals at risk of or experiencing exploitation; which prevents the need for statutory intervention.
- To increase disruption, arrests and prosecution of offenders involved in exploitation; effective management of those in medium-high risk offending and deter those involved in lower level criminology.
- To strengthen resilience of victims and communities to mitigate harm caused by exploitation by raising awareness of risks through active communications and training.
- To secure and sustain a collective commitment to addressing and responding to exploitation across all partner agencies and to demonstrate effective leadership in driving the appropriate system, culture and process changes forward.
- To ensure the effectiveness of service provision:
  - Evidence-based practice will be developed and promoted
  - Work with individuals will be measured by its impact on outcomes
  - The views of individuals, their families and their support networks will inform the development of effective interventions
  - Single and multi-agency audits will be undertaken to monitor the effectiveness of interventions. This process will seek evidence that the voice of the individual has been taken into account in all assessments, planning processes and reviews.

6. Our Priorities

Priority 1 – Prevention

Improve awareness, understanding and early recognition of exploitation across the partnership, communities and society.

- The multi-agency workforce has a clear understanding of exploitation
- The multi-agency workforce is better able to recognise exploitation and the importance of early intervention, and practitioners are confident enough to respond promptly and effectively to address underlying factors
- Members of the community/society are better equipped to recognise exploitation in all its forms and how to report it.
- Planners ensure that designs for social and community settings consider opportunities for exploitative behaviour
- Ensure the workforce (including public, independent, and community voluntary sector) receives appropriate learning and development opportunities relevant to their role
- Commissioned service providers ensure their workforce is able to recognise exploitation and respond to it
- Good quality data is available to inform problem solving. Agencies regularly problem-profile their local area to analyse and understand all the patterns of exploitation to which children, young people and adults are subjected to. A comprehensive problem-profile is available and shared across all key partners to inform the development of a multi-agency strategy and action plans, the commissioning of services and the delivery of training and awareness-raising activity to support local professionals.

Priority 2 – Protection

Improve individuals and communities resilience to tackle and reduce exploitation and the interventions to tackle exploitation.

- Effective, multi-disciplinary procedures, tools and pathways are embedded and reviewed over time to ensure effectiveness
- Assessments and response to include consideration of the context in which exploitation takes place
- Child protection plans, safeguarding plans and trigger plans are effective and kept under review
- Support is made available in a timely manner to victims in their recovery
- Language Matters - appropriate terminology is used when discussing individuals who have been exploited, or are at risk of exploitation
- Professionals challenge each other and escalate as appropriate when there are professional differences of opinion

Priority 3 - Partnership and Leadership

Secure a collective commitment to tackle exploitation across the partnership and demonstrate effective leadership in driving forward changes required

- Early identification and the effective response to exploitation is a priority across all organisations, both statutory and non-statutory
- Develop a multi-agency strategy to support the delivery of an effective range of interventions to tackle exploitation
- Promote a clear local partnership response to exploitation that takes a strength based approach
- Leaders drive the importance of sharing information appropriately in order to tackle exploitation effectively
- Leaders invest in the development and support of staff, including provision of regular supervision and the opportunities for them to reflect on practice. Those professionals who offer direct support to exploited children, young people and adults might require further intensive training and must have regular opportunities to reflect on their practice with a skilled consultant or supervisor.

Priority 4 – Pursue

Improve prosecutions and disruption of individuals and groups responsible for exploitation.

- Effective arrangements to identify, disrupt and increase arrests and prosecution of offenders involved in crimes associated with all forms of exploitation and the effective management of those in medium-high risk offending and deter those involved in lower level criminology are in place
- Development of regional and local profiles
- Deterring potential offenders through increased awareness and reducing opportunities.

7. Measuring Success

The success of the strategy will be measured based on a range of quantitative and qualitative measures:

Quantitative Measures	Aim to
Timeliness of response to referrals/concerns	↑
Increase in exploitation referrals/concerns	↑
Improve prosecution outcomes for crimes associated with exploitation	↑
Increase over time in percentage of agencies grading themselves good or outstanding against practice standards	↑
Increase in NRM referrals	↑
Increase in FIB submissions	↑
Agency attendance at ShEP meetings	↑
Increase in number of safety plans due to risk of exploitation	↑
Decrease in numbers of children/adults who are re-referred due to exploitation concerns following disruption/safeguarding interventions	↓

Qualitative Measures	Aim to
Audits of exploitation cases evidence effective screening, intervention, information sharing and multi-agency working	✓
Positive evaluation of ShEP through proportionate case tracking	✓
Increase in practitioner confidence and skills across the workforce	↑
Evidence of positive feedback from individuals on their experiences and the impact of support received	✓

8. Review and Evaluation

- This Strategy will be reviewed on a two-yearly basis for relevance and effectiveness. The first review will be due in April 2022 to be co-ordinated by the Exploitation Reduction Delivery Group on behalf of the Exploitation Reduction Board.
- The Delivery Action Plan will be monitored against identified outcomes and the difference made to individuals, their families and supporters will be evaluated through audits and other quality assurance activity through routine reporting from the Exploitation Reduction Board to Solihull Together, Solihull Safeguarding Adults Board, Solihull Local Safeguarding Childrens Partnership and Safer Solihull.

Glossary of Terms

Adult safeguarding	Safeguarding adult's means protecting a person's right to live in safety, free from abuse and neglect. Statutory duties are outlined in the Care Act (2014). An adult at risk is any person who is aged 18 years or over and at risk of abuse or neglect because of their needs for care and or support.
Bogus callers	Bogus callers are someone pretending to be someone they are not. If you are not expecting anyone to visit you for a product or service, do not let them into your home and if you're really unsure, don't open the door.
Channel	Channel is part of the Prevent strategy. The process is a multi-agency approach to identify and provide support to individuals who are at risk of being drawn into terrorism.
Contextual Safeguarding	'Contextual safeguarding' is an approach to safeguarding that responds to young people's experiences of harm outside of the home, for example, with peers, in schools and in neighbourhoods. ... Contextual safeguarding framework with specific reference to how contexts relate to each other and inform young people's behaviours.
Criminal exploitation	Criminal exploitation is a form of modern slavery that sees victims being forced to work under the control of highly organised criminals in activities such as forced begging, shoplifting and pickpocketing, cannabis cultivation, drug dealing and financial exploitation.
Domestic violence and abuse	Any incident or pattern of incidents of controlling, coercive or threatening behaviour, violence or abuse between those aged 16 or over who are or have been intimate partners or family members regardless of gender or sexuality. This can encompass but is not limited to the following types of abuse: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• psychological</li> <li>• physical</li> <li>• sexual</li> <li>• financial</li> <li>• emotional</li> </ul>
Exploitation Reduction Board (ERB)	The Exploitation Reduction Board (ERB) is responsible for overseeing the development of strategic priorities, and will co-ordinate actions and oversee delivery of these, in respect of both children and adults who are victims, or at risk of exploitation.
FGM	Female genital mutilation (FGM), also known as female genital cutting and female circumcision, is the ritual cutting or removal of some or all of the external female genitalia.
FIB	Force Intelligence Bureau (FIB) Form. The purpose of the Force Intelligence Bureau (FIB) Form, also referred to as the West Midlands Police Information Report, is to inform the police of any intelligence that has been gathered during day to day working.
Forced marriages	Forced marriage is a marriage in which one or more of the parties is married without their consent or against their will.
Hate crime	The term 'hate crime' can be used to describe a range of criminal behaviour where the perpetrator is motivated by hostility or demonstrates hostility towards the victim's disability, race, religion, sexual orientation or transgender identity.

Honour based violence	Honour based violence is a violent crime or incident which may have been committed to protect or defend the honour of the family or community.
Human trafficking	Human trafficking means: "The recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or purchase of persons for the sole purpose of exploitation."
LSCP	The Local Safeguarding Children Partnership is responsible for ensuring that safeguarding children arrangements in the local area are effective. It has a role in supporting the development of local strategies to improve safeguarding outcomes for children and young people.
MASE	The MASE is a multi-agency sexual exploitation meeting. It is aimed at preventing children and young people from being exploited by working together to gather, share and understand information and intelligence in order to identify potential risks and for agencies to use their resources to protect the child or young person.
MARAC	MARAC, or multi-agency risk assessment conference, is a meeting where information is shared on the highest risk domestic abuse cases between representatives of local police, probation, health, child protection, housing practitioners, Independent Domestic Violence Advisors (IDVAs) and other specialists from the statutory and voluntary sector.
Modern slavery	Modern Slavery. Slavery is an umbrella term for activities involved when one person obtains or holds another person in compelled service. Someone is in slavery if they are: forced to work through mental or physical threat.
